

Technology...and how it's shaping the operating models of tomorrow

From overseeing major changes in working environments to managing increased information demands from investors, the pandemic has put operational leaders under more pressure than ever before.

To meet these new challenges, technology has taken centre stage. Operational heads have needed to provide the optimal equipment for working securely at home, while also ensuring teams are able to connect and collaborate. On top of this, digital platforms have provided a vital means of delivering critical fund outputs.

We recently sponsored a roundtable, in collaboration with The Drawdown and Real Deals, to explore key challenges and other key technological developments impacting fund operations. Our Chief Information Officer, St John Cabot, also joined the discussion.

Find out what some of the industry's experts had to say on the topic

Download the write up

To watch the roundtable, please click here.